After the Rally Nifty Heading For Correction In Levels
Market To Witness Highly Volatile Trading Days

March 2020 Performance Outlook

As predicted, from 23rd March onwards, Market to create the bottom and witness a rally and that is exactly how the market behaved. From the bottom, Nifty rallied almost 21% which surprised everyone.

Crude has given the most unexpected move closing in negative. Further, the closing of 6 debt schemes by Franklin Templeton has led the markets into panic mode.

This rally has raised the hope of the market getting back on track and created many speculations in the minds of the market participants about the next market move.

We have been very clear in our yearly analysis report that the market is going to be bearish in 2020 and we don't expect the economies to perform well in 2020 based on our Time Theory.

Time Theory Astro Outlook for May 2020

Our Astro charts indicate that Nifty will move in a range in the initial of the month days. Till 15 May the chart is quite bullish, but the planetary position is of weak strength so in this time frame, it can make a final upward movement but may struggle as a result every rise will be sold off and Nifty will stay range-bound. After 15 May the Astro charts turn to be bearish which soon exhausts with the rally it picked from 24th March. In the month of May 2020, Nifty will see a correction from the current levels created at the end of April month. The trend of the month will be bearish, volatility and a short covering can be seen very frequently. This pattern will make this month very tedious for the traders.

As per the Astro cycles, in this month we are ending with the bullish trend and will be entering into the bearish trend cycle.

Market Trends – Important Dates

May 4th – 8th:

This week, Nifty will enter into the final phase of its rally started from 23 March. There will be no major level changes but the market can experience volatility.

For a majority of the trading days in this week, the market will have a rise, and Nifty will trade range-bound.

May 11th – 15th:

This week in the trading days, the market will have very broad trading days and will majorly trade either side of the range. The pressure on the levels will still be maintained. May 11th will be the only trading day with a small trading range, the rest of the days will have a much broader trading range and will remain volatile. On the 14th of May, the Market may have a good gap up opening and the gains made after the trade will be sold off.

Market Trends – Important Dates

May 18th – 22nd:

This week we will see the market acting extremely volatile, although we expect that on May 20 and 21, the market will have a good gap up opening and experience a positive trend.

May 25th - 29th:

This is the expiry week, we may see a good short covering on May 27 and 28, though the market will remain under pressure.

Time Theory Predictions for Crude and Currency

Crude will stay range-bound in this month at basic levels, there will be no further eventful movements in crude levels. Taking long positions in the far future can be very beneficial. But for this month we don't see any major movement in crude.

Although currency will still be under pressure, we expect the currency to have range-bound trading in this month.

Expert Recommendations

Based on our Time Theory, we predict that the market will enter into a bearish trend after 15 May. We advise our trading subscribers to maintain bearish positions and do profit booking.

To the investors, we advise continuing the wait to make your investment as we have a bearish outlook for the market in the future time period as well.
